BRITISH RAILWAY MODELLING
LINESIDE BUILDINGS

In an attempt to inspire and inform both budding and existing enthusiasts alike, Line-side Buildings is the first in a series of illustrated books from the publishers of British Railway Modelling specially written to reveal just how easy the various facets of the layout building can be.

Having chatted to many modellers about making model buildings at shows over the years I am well aware that not all model buildings that not all model railway enthusiasts have the time, inclination or simply the skill to scratch build structures like the ones I enjoy making for my own layout. These modellers do however still want good scale model buildings on their layouts but are often unsure of the best place to start. This book has all the answers.

Model Railways the easy way
A practical guide to making compact layouts for the railway modeller
Written & Photographed by Peter Marriott
The model railway hobby has never been so much fun. Locomotives and rolling stock are now well detailed and they run well. Digital control is possible together with sound effects. Those interested in making scenery are spoilt for choice with a huge number of good products now available. In this book Peter Marriott aims to give confidence to all those new to the hobby and those who would like to make their first layout but are unsure of how to begin. The book has been written and photographed to be as practical as possible. It features layout projects that show in words and pictures how to go about building a layout.
